CHICAGO HOUSING AUTHORITY™ YEAR OF THE YOUTH

2016 SUMMER YOUTH OPPORTUNITIES RECAP

Summer opportunities, including jobs, learning and meals, matter for our young people. They not only keep them safe, healthy and engaged while school is out, but studies have shown that summer opportunities can prevent academic skills slide and may reduce violence.

With the announcement of 2016 as Year of the Youth, the Chicago Housing Authority (CHA) proudly expanded its summer opportunities to engage more young people in meaningful paid employment and rich, non-paid learning opportunities to move summer from a time of risk to resiliency and opportunity.

Through a collective impact approach involving employers, education institutions and FamilyWorks providers, CHA exceeded its goal, by 14%, to employ 2,400 youth in career building summer opportunities. With programs designed to build competencies necessary to succeed in life, such as academic achievement, earning power and stability, youth were able to develop self-confidence, earn a paycheck and explore a future career path.

In total, nearly 5,000 Public Housing residents and Housing Choice Voucher holders, ages 6 – 24, engaged in intense academic immersion, learned teamwork and civic leadership, and were payday ready through financial education. In addition, they enjoyed a rich experience of experiential learning that included activities ranging from elevating their voice through the documentary film production process to opening up the code of Minecraft, creating community murals alongside working artists and using improvisation to improve critical thinking and collaboration.
